
From basketball to black-tie ball

W&L's black student community observed Black Awareness Week in March in a variety of ways—ranging from a benefit basketball game to a formal dance. Members of the Student Association for Black Unity (SABU) sponsored a benefit basketball game against staff members of two Lynchburg radio stations, WLGM and WJJS, with proceeds going to the Lexington Boys Club. The social highlight of the week was the fifth annual Black Awareness Ball, with Evans Hall elaborately decorated as the Copa. The music was provided by Anglo-Saxon Brown, a highly popular black jazz group from England.
