Washington & Lee University
Lexington, Virginia 24450

Dear President Wilson:

I read in yesterday's Roanoke Times of your intention to again review the question of whether or not Washington & Lee should become a co-educational university. As a 1967 graduate of W & L, I strongly endorse such a move for two reasons. First, W & L cannot hope to maintain its strong academic reputation if it continues to disqualify for admission approximately half of all college applicants. Indeed, two of my law partners who graduated from W & L each have three daughters and no sons. Each of these graduates is a strong supporter of W & L and were the university co-ed, at least some of their six daughters would probably attend W & L. My wife also has a daughter (by a previous marriage) who would like to attend W & L since her father went there. In short, W & L's all male policy simply eliminates too many potential and enthusiastic applicants.

Secondly, while as a student, I took full advantage of W & L's rather "sporty" image, as a parent I take a wholly different view of the matter. Looking back on things, I am amazed that I was not a casualty of W & L's other "tradition" of drinking and driving. Two of my friends were not so fortunate. Allowing women to attend W & L would not only greatly reduce the incidence of W & L students drinking and driving to pick up dates, but would otherwise go a long way toward creating a better balanced university atmosphere.

I will always financially support W & L regardless of the decision that is made on this issue, but the outcome will largely determine whether my children and many others will be allowed or encouraged to attend Washington & Lee in the future.

Thank you very much for your consideration in this matter, and I look forward to hearing your address to our alumni group on October 26th.

Very truly yours,
